Long Lost Lovers

Long Lost Lovers

Sakura looked up at the moon as it shined brightly down on the venue. She took a deep sigh as she realized just how nice it was tonight. It was the perfect night for swing dancing but something else was in the air. She could feel deep down inside that something else about this night was different. As she headed inside she could a strange chill go through her. When she crossed the room her eyes searched for someone, she wasn't sure who, but as her eyes landed on him she knew there was something about him that seemed a little too familiar.

Three Years Earlierâ€¦.

It was a beautiful spring morning and sakura was headed out of her dorm and towards her first class that was about to be three hours early to just so she could enjoy sitting in the courtyard and enjoying the spring flowers surround her and the smell. She arrived at the quad in front of her classroom and took a seat in front of a large tree she had found with lots of cherry blossoms scattered around her. The air smelled so good and the space gave her a sense of peace.

She sighs as she settles in and closes her eyes for a brief moment. She could feel a slight breeze pass through her hair as she felt herself slowly drifting off into a nap. She let out a sigh of relief as she relaxed. As she was fully about to drift into slumber she had this feeling as if someone was watching her. Dismissing the thought she feel asleep in the little sanctuary that had been created around her casting her an angelic glow.

Meanwhile in a third floor classroomâ€¦..

Syaoran found himself lazily looking outside avoiding listening to his professor drone on and on about parabolas and other quadratics. He found himself looking at the clouds and sighing wondering when something interesting would happen. It was when his eyes slowly drifted downward is when he noticed her. Peacefully sleeping under a tree looking so angelic surrounded by sakura blossoms. He couldn't take his off of her.

"Who are you?"

He whispers as he continues to watch her. He didn't stop watching her until he felt a tap on his shoulder and ripped his eyes away to notice that it was his professor looking at him annoyed and amused at the same time. He stares down at him quizzically.

"Syaoran maybe you can enlighten us on what you are so focused on instead of my lecture"

Syaoran blinks and looks back toward the tree to see that the angel he had been staring at had moved and was no longer there. A little heartbroken he looks back at his teacher and shrugs his shoulders.

"Nothing professor i just think anything is interesting when it's not your lecture"

Annoyed his teacher huffs and stalks toward the classroom.

"Class Dismissed"

He huffs and stalks toward the front door of the classroom. He catches the eyes of his cousin eriol and smirks. Eriol rolls his eyes and looks at him amused and walks over to him ruffling his hair and letting out a chuckle at his discomfort.

"Come on let's go get something to eat"

The two stalk out of the room and down the hall to the cafeteria,

This is my first story in a long time on a new account because I forgot my password to the other one -_- but tell me what you think -^_^-
